

August 17, 2004

Welcome to our first ever “3rd Wednesday” for the TriBakery group.

Every third Wednesday of the month we will postpone our normal group discussion. This is so we can not only grow in the content that we discuss but also in the friendships we form here in the TriBakery group. So go get something to eat, and something to drink, sit down and introduce yourself to those around you. If you are having trouble finding something to talk about perhaps the quotes below could help stir discussion.

Enjoy
Kirk

Quotes:

“The reason I began writing – and continue to write – springs from a desire to understand in my own terms what is insufficiently understandable in the terms made available to me.”

Carl Phillips, poet
From Coin of the Realm, Graywolf Press 2004

“Listening, though, might be the most useful tool we have in sharing the Good News. It might also be the most neglected. The very skill that could prime the pump of thoughtful dialogue, open hearts to accept conviction of sin, establish common ground for further dialogue, or give insight to felt needs remains, for a lot of Christians, an untapped resource.”

Randy Newman, author and speaker
From Questioning Evangelism, Kregel Publications 2004

August 17, 2004

Welcome to our first ever “3rd Wednesday” for the TriBakery group.

Every third Wednesday of the month we will postpone our normal group discussion. This is so we can not only grow in the content that we discuss but also in the friendships we form here in the TriBakery group. So go get something to eat, and something to drink, sit down and introduce yourself to those around you. If you are having trouble finding something to talk about perhaps the quotes below could help stir discussion.

Enjoy
Kirk

Quotes:

“The reason I began writing – and continue to write – springs from a desire to understand in my own terms what is insufficiently understandable in the terms made available to me.”

Carl Phillips, poet
From Coin of the Realm, Graywolf Press 2004

“Listening, though, might be the most useful tool we have in sharing the Good News. It might also be the most neglected. The very skill that could prime the pump of thoughtful dialogue, open hearts to accept conviction of sin, establish common ground for further dialogue, or give insight to felt needs remains, for a lot of Christians, an untapped resource.”

Randy Newman, author and speaker
From Questioning Evangelism, Kregel Publications 2004